Soundlogic bluetooth speaker 5b309bt instructions

Lost my instructions -Question by Sherry Bright 1:31am, 11th April 2018 Skip to main contentAdd more life to your picnics or your parties with these top of the line bluetooth speakers from such brands as LG and BoseJanuary 7, 2019If you're in the market for a Bluetooth speaker, you don't have to skimp on smarts, quality, or design in the name of portability and convenience. The biggest trend in 2018 was manufacturers adding Amazon's Alexa and the Google Assistant to their wares—a boon if the former's Echo line or the latter's Home speakers don't quite do it for your space. A new focus on softer aesthetics helps the devices blend in wherever you place them, too—something you can't say for most traditional HiFi systems. And if that's in a suitcase for this winter's beach getaway, even better. After all, aside from a nasty sunburn or forgetting your umbrella, being stuck with tinny sound from your smartphone's speakers is the easiest way to ruin time spent by the water. Whether you're looking for a tabletop unit or something that'll survive sand and spills, we've got you covered. Who says portable Bluetooth speakers have to look like a can of Pringles? With the lantern-style SoundLink Revolve+, it's clear Bose doesn't subscribe to that theory. The handle, 360-degree audio, and ample battery life make carrying and listening a breeze, while the shock-and-waterproof construction means you won't have to worry about it getting banged up or left outside overnight. Starting at $299If you want multiroom audio, voice control, rich sound, and midcentury design, take a gander at The Three from Klipsch. The copper toggle switch and control knobs mated to genuine walnut or ebony veneer easily make this the classiest-looking Google Assistant- and Alexa-enabled speaker we've seen. It gets even better once you connect a turntable to its powered phono input, or digital music via WiFi, Bluetooth, or USB, and hear the full-range stereo drivers and large 5.25-inch woofer kick out the jams. Starting at $499For your next backyard rave, grab the LG Xboom Go PK7. In addition to splash-resistant construction and Meridian Audio-tuned 40-watt drivers, the Xboom features built-in LED lighting that flashes along to the music. AptX HD Audio keeps Bluetooth sources sounding true while the 18-hour battery ensures the party doesn't stop just because the sun is rising. Starting at $129Setting up multiple wireless speakers can be an absolute pain. If you pick up a few Sounddots, that doesn't have to be the case. Simply place the speakers next to each other—or stack them—and they automatically pair and adjust their audio output to give you the best experience. The modular system grows with your audio needs, be it starting with a simple soundbar setup with three units, taking one with you on the go, or creating a literal wall of sound with dozens linked together. Starting at $299The Megablast and the Megaboom 3 have a lot in common: They're both waterproof, have long-lasting battery life, offer 360-degree sound with plenty of bass, and are available in a bevy of striking colors. It's just that the Megaboom 3 is more or less a traditional Bluetooth speaker, whereas the Megablast will connect to WiFi and packs Alexa inside. If you're searching for a better-sounding Echo, look no further—just don't forget to grab one of Ultimate Ears' charging bases for always-on voice controls. Photo Courtesy: Amazon If you're looking for impressive sound in a compact speaker that you can take with you on your travels, it's time to replace that clunky speaker you've had for years with a Bluetooth speaker. Whether you're looking for the best outdoor Bluetooth speaker, a stylish speaker, or a waterproof Bluetooth speaker, you'll find plenty of options. Some speakers have a longer battery life while others stand out for their impressive sound quality and other notable features. MORE FROM CONSUMERSEARCH.COM
